HOGS WOULDN'T EAT CORN

Animals From Louisiana Had Become Accustomed to Their Diet of Nuts, and Wanted Them.

One of the strangest sights at the Kansas City stockyards in recent months was the arrival of six carloads of hogs from northern Louisiana, about six hundred in all, that did not know what corn was. Several bushels of corn were thrown into the pens where they were yarded, and the hogs cracked a few grains, tried to extract a kernel, and gave it up as a bad job.

All the while aristocratic swine from the corn belt in adjoining pens were cracking and eating corn rapidly. Hearing the noise, the southern hogs tried to discover the source of their food supply by looking through the cracks in the fence.

Salesmen and yardmen, looking over the fence, threw grains of corn into the air and let them fall among the hogs. They followed the sound to where the corn fell, but refused to accept it as food. The hogs were of the razorback type, with heads as long as the rest of the body. Some had long, tusklike teeth that had been worn into grooves by cracking nuts.

These hogs were shipped from northern Louisiana to Kansas City. The small amount of fat they carried was gained by eating nuts, roots and leaves or mast. They ranged in weight from 90 to 175 pounds.

The prices bid for them were $6 to $6.50. This class of hogs is said to make an excellent kind of lean bacon.—Kansas City Star.

Lotteries Popular.

Lotteries seem to have been very popular in Philadelphia in the old days, and year after year big drawings were held in the Quaker city. In Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette of February 22, 1759, there was a big advertisement which advocated a lottery to raise $1,200 for the finishing of the English church in New Brunswick. From 1761 on lotteries were so common in Pennsylvania that the law forbidding them almost became a dead letter. Almost the whole community speculated in tickets, and the objects for the numerous schemes were extremely various. In 1834 a society was formed, named "The Pennsylvania Society for the Suppression of Lotteries."

Varying Degrees of Fear.

Fear is the only and also the greatest factor in making medical progress. The fear of shock following surgical operations has caused methods to be discovered which will eliminate or decrease shocks. The woman who fears to trust herself in the hands of an unknown surgeon or one with a dubious reputation has a right sense of fear. On the other hand, one who will not, under the best circumstances, submit to a necessary operation is possessed of a fright-cowardice.

GETS NEW PROPELLER AT SEA

Ship's Bow Was Weighted Down So That the Stern Would Rise Above the Water.

Having been held up for one year at Petrograd on account of the war, the Norwegian tramp steamship, Ulriken, finally got her release and went to Christiania, whence she sailed for New York on August 23. She has just reached here after a dangerous voyage, says the World of that city.

In latitude 57.43, longitude 38.24, on September 1, the Ulriken struck a submerged obstruction, the character of which her skipper and her crew could not make out. The collision cost the Norwegian tramp her propeller. It happened in a heavy storm that did not abate for a month, during which the steamer drifted 1,166 miles. The Ulriken was swept dangerously near the coast of Iceland and all aboard had given up hope when the weather conditions changed for the better.

By filling the forward tanks with water the Ulriken's stern was lifted sufficiently high above the surface of the sea to make practicable the installment of the extra propeller she carried. This brought her safely to New York.
